

County Executive Molinaro Celebrates Grand Opening of ReCommunity Beacon

Dutchess County Executive Marcus J. Molinaro joined with officials from the City of Beacon and the business community for the ceremonial grand opening event for ReCommunity Beacon, the state-of-the-art automated recycling facility located 508 Fishkill Avenue in Beacon. ReCommunity invested $7.5 million to build and install state-of-the-art sorting equipment in the 52,000 square foot building to process recyclable plastics, old newspapers, junk mail, magazines, office papers, cardboard, tin, aluminum and glass food and beverage containers.

County Executive Molinaro said, “Having ReCommunity located in our Dutchess County community is a win-win. This state of the art facility brings new jobs to the community and will be an important component in our efforts to increase the recycling rates in Dutchess County. ReCommunity’s simplified, single stream recycling expands the list of acceptable materials and makes recycling easy for residents.”

County Executive Molinaro welcomes ReCommunity to Dutchess County. ReCommunity is a state-of-the-art Materials Recovery Facility located in Beacon.

County Executive Molinaro joins City of Beacon Mayor Randy Casale and officials from ReCommunity to push the electronic control to ceremonially start operations at ReCommunity's new facility in Beacon.

ReCommunity loves Beacon! A bale of crushed beverage bottles can be seen to the right in the first stage of recycling. Pictured from left to right: City of Beacon councilwoman Agnes Papula Compagnone, City of Beacon Mayor Randy Casale, County Executive Marc Molinaro and City of Beacon councilman George Mansfield.

